

ABSTRACT

This study aimed to identify the electronic marital infidelity, the researcher used the inductive descriptive approach based on collecting the information from its original sources, in addition to use the internet network because of the modern topic of this thesis. The study divided to an introduction, two chapters, and a conclusion.

However, the introduction contain the research title, and the reasons of selection, the objectives, the importance of study, the methodology of the study, and the previous studies. The first chapter contain the definition of the electronic marital infidelity linguistically and idiomatically. In addition to the causes of electronic marital infidelity from a legitimacy and law perspectives. The second chapter talked about the negative effects of the electronic marital infidelity on family and society as a whole, and the way of treating it from a legitimacy and educational perspectives. Finally, the research viewed the most important results, in addition to the references.

One of the most important results of this study that the electronic marital infidelity is a modern pattern of the marital infidelity , and it has a lot of reasons, some of these reasons are general, and other are special for husband or wife.

Nevertheless, all of these types are ill gotten. However, to treat the marital infidelity we must firstly search about its reasons, and then establish ways in which to prevent and limit them.

This research recommended a group of recommendations, the most important of them was; the need to urge ministries to adhere to their roles to increase the awareness of the dangers of marital infidelity, and urged the Parents to provide psychological and safe environment for their children. Finally, Monitor sites their children visit on social media