GARBAGE CLINICAL INSURANCE

GAMAL ALBINSaid

Gamal Albinsaid is a social entrepreneur from Indonesia and founder of Garbage Clinical Insurance. The micro health insurance program was launched in 2017 with the sole purpose of providing locals access to health facilities at an affordable price. With Garbage Clinical Insurance, customers pay for the services they were provided with garbage from their homes. His inspiration for this program comes from Gamal's firsthand experience with the poor health services available to lower income families in his native country. As a result of this groundbreaking initiative, Gamal was awarded the HRH Prince of Wales Young Sustainability Entrepreneur Award and looks forward to expanding this program across other regions.

ABEDALRAHMAN ALZGHOUL

BREAD FOR EDUCATION

Abedalrahman Ali Al-Zghoul is the founder of Bread for Education, a non-profit organization launched in 2013 dedicated to recycling leftover bread from local businesses and institutions to help underprivileged kids and young adults go to school. Once collected, the leftover bread is sold to farmers and traders as food for their livestock and the money raised is turned into scholarship funds for underprivileged kids. Passionate about educating the local community while tackling poverty in his home country, Abedalrahman has already made a great impact. The monetary funds collected from selling the bread has helped more than 30,000 kids with scholarships and expanded to help those across Palestine, Morocco and Dubai. So far, the project has collected and recycled more than 40,000 tons of bread and employs 80 works across these countries.

CORE9 FITNESS

JASON DOLAN

Core9 co-founder Jason Dolan channeled his unique 15-year military expertise and insight into the successful fitness model that is Core9. First established in 2013, the brand has steadily grown to encompass seven franchise sites within three states across Australia. Core9's mission is to revolutionize the fitness industry by offering elite training methods used in a fun, fully flexible 31-minute workout that breaks down all barriers that shy away people from fitness and health. Behind the scenes, Jason also has a greater impetus spurring him on. As an ex-service man, he understands the challenges that meet ex-services personnel embracing civilian life. Core9's vision is to offer a quality fitness product to the general public while providing a career path, culture and sense of belonging to military and emergency service personnel. Core9 Fitness successfully opened its first veteran-owned franchise in 2016. Additional six veteran-owned clubs are now in operation with more to open in 2019.

BROOKE GAGLIANO

FRUTTA BOWLS FRANCHISING LLC

Brooke graduated from Drew University in 2014 majoring in business with a minor in biology and art. After college, Brooke used her passion for athletic education to start her own business training sports teams and clients, which is where she was first introduced to acai. While on a trip out west, Brooke had her first acai bowl and the idea for Frutta Bowls was born. With the support of her friends and family, she opened her first store in May 2016 in Howell, New Jersey, at age 23. The Frutta Bowls dream started as a local idea with two locations. It has since grown into a nationwide concept, continuing to positively affect many lives along the way. Frutta Bowls sets itself apart by not only its commitment to providing healthy and delicious food, but also by its involvement in the communities surrounding each location.

Abigail Chepkwurui, Uganda

Abigail is a 20-year-old university student, entrepreneur, activist, and community mobilizer from Kween, a rural district in Eastern Uganda. Abigail started her own catering business while still in secondary school by realizing a pressing need in her own community—local workers who did not have anywhere to eat their meals. What started as providing water and juice for a group of construction workers in her town transformed into a 3-month, multi-million Ugandan Shillings contract and what became Hosana Women's Catering Group, Abigail's business that employs women in her community.

Alieu Jallow, Gambia

Alieu is a social entrepreneur from Gambia. He dedicates his life and career to build opportunities for young people like him. In 2015, he founded the first ever business incubator "Startup Incubator Gambia" which has so far supported 86 startups and created 300 jobs in the past three years. In 2012 he founded the "Young Entrepreneur Association of the Gambia" where he launched the Youth Entrepreneurship Summit + Job Fair for 500 young people across the country centered on innovation, entrepreneurship, and professional development. With his work, Alieu has reached over 1000
